DECORATING WITH Willett FURNITURE

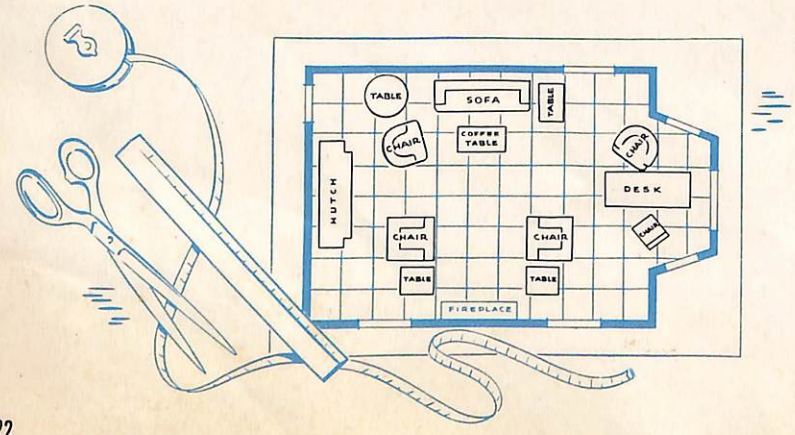
by
Elizabeth Whitney
A.I.D.

Design for Living is a familiar term used in decoration today. It suggests that balance, rhythm and harmony are necessary to get the most out of life. Modern living requires flexibility of arrangement and the selection of furniture should be influenced by the activities we pursue. Willett solid cherry and maple furniture is available in a wide variety of pieces, and from this collection you can make many different groupings.

The primary purpose of a good design for living is to bring out the beauty of everyday surroundings, but we cannot achieve this without an orderly plan and approach.

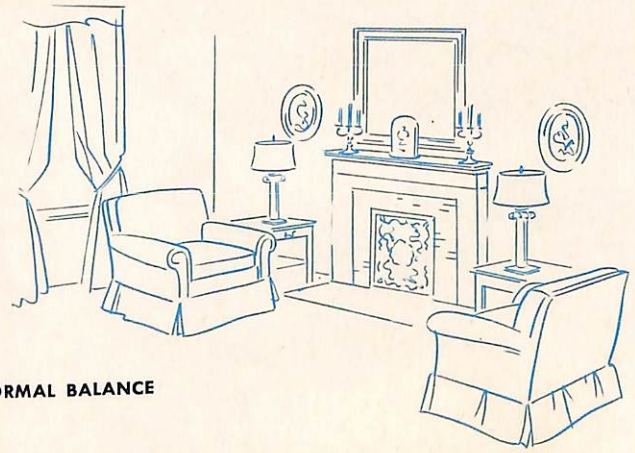
The shape of your room, its architectural details and the furniture arrangement will determine your final choice of fabrics, rugs, accessories and color scheme, so we start with the floor plan. If we tackle this problem on paper first, we can save our strength and energy for ideas.

Measure your room as accurately as possible. Draw on paper an outline which will include bay windows, projections or indentations to scale. Let one-half inch equal one foot. Show the exact location of windows, doors, fireplaces and electrical outlets. Next, measure the width and length of each piece of furniture. Draw on another piece of paper a rectangle, square, circle or oval to correspond with these dimensions using the one-half inch scale. Cut out these patterns and label each by name.

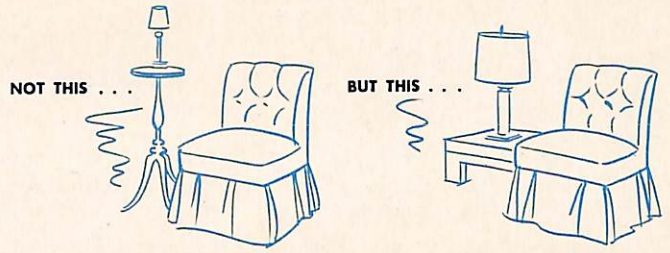


Room Planning Good rooms are developed around the activities of the people who will use them. Build arrangements around important focal points such as fireplaces, or picture windows. Think of furniture in groups and plan areas for people to sit and converse freely. Include places for music, television, reading, writing and games. Provide plenty of tables for ash trays, cigarettes and beverages. Don't always place your dining table in the center of the room, but try placing it in front of a picture window. Use a drop-leaf table if the room is small and place it against the wall. Do use at least eight chairs and put two of them in the hall or living room. Avoid placing beds to face the light. Place twin beds together, or in front of a window to gain additional floor area. Provide bedrooms with comfortable chairs for reading or sewing. Give children plenty of storage room to encourage neatness. In every case, keep traffic lanes clear.

Balance and Scale Use your paper floor plan and patterns to experiment with your own ideas. As you group your pieces, think about balance. The use of furniture and accessories in pairs is called formal balance, such as the arrangement shown on Page 5. An identical table, chair and lamp are used on either side of the sofa. This is an example of formal balance because the weight or mass on each side is equal. Informal balance is the illusion of weight or mass being identical, as illustrated on Page 4. Here, the sofa is balanced by the chair, table and chest opposite, so that to the eye, the weight or mass seems identical. Balance is important on walls, too. Turn to Page 3 and notice how the drop-leaf table with bird prints above balances the secretary on the fireplace wall. Try not to use your heaviest and tallest pieces on one side of the room and the light, low pieces on the other. We sit in rooms more often than we stand, so table and chest tops look best when they are low. Try to keep table tops on a line with sofa and chair arms. Mirrors can help table tops on a line with sofa and chair arms. Give some consideration to balance because they reflect masses opposite. Give some consideration to scale. Scale is the relationship of one object to another. Use large furniture in large rooms and small furniture in small rooms, or use small tables with small chairs and large tables with large chairs. Scale is nothing more than good proportion, and is one of the secrets of creating a beautiful room.



FORMAL BALANCE



Rhythm Every successful room seems to have a subtle quality which creates a feeling of repose and this quality we call rhythm. It is established by the repetition of some particular line, design, or color. Page 15 shows an interesting example. The round motif in the paper, the oval mirror which reflects the round form of the tea urn, and the swag valance of the draperies have a rhythm motif based on a circle. On Page 6 the balloon form of the cherry paper, the chair backs, and the fan shape of the pleats in the valance have a rhythm based on a diagonal motif. This dining room also has a design rhythm of cherries, which is repeated in the paper, the china, and as decoration in the fruit bowl. See how many examples of rhythm you can find in this book.

Selection of Furniture

At this point you have probably found the furniture arrangement that meets your requirements, and are now ready to select the actual pieces. Harmony is important in your relationship with people, and it is essential to your decoration scheme. Harmony of design is the use of the proper fabrics, rugs, and accessories to set off your Willett furniture.

The Color Scheme

Color is a very powerful element in your design for living. Put it to work, for it acts like magic. Make it give your room a better shape by accenting the good features and subduing the bad ones. Make it enlarge or enclose your area. Balance color just as you do furniture and check it for scale and rhythm. It has weight, too — dark colors on large pieces make them smaller just as light colors on small pieces make them larger. Select your scheme from a favorite painting, a printed fabric, a pattern rug, or make it complement an unusual accessory. Remember when using color that the larger the area, the more it should be subdued, and the smaller the area, the more intense it should be. Achieve rhythm by using a bright accent color.

IF YOU LIKE THE SIMPLE, INFORMAL WAY OF LIFE, THEN CHOOSE YOUR FURNITURE FROM WILLETT Golden Beryl OR Lancaster County Maple GROUP ALTHOUGH LANCASTER COUNTY FURNITURE IS EQUALLY CORRECT IN MORE FORMAL LIVING

Use Maple with:

Pine panelling, rich, deep, painted backgrounds
Quaint and whimsical papers
Small pattern or plain colorful cotton prints
Early American or French Provincial chintzes
Plaids, rough textures, and homespuns
Cotton, linen or wool damasks
Antique brass, copper, pewter and wrought iron
Early American glass
Hooked, braided, cotton or linen rugs
Plain and decorated pottery
Wrought iron hinges
Fruit and floral prints, American Primitive paintings
Painted boxes and trays
Stencil design chairs and chests
Quilting, crewel embroidery and needlework

IF YOU LIKE A FORMAL AND TRADITIONAL DECORATIVE SCHEME WITH DIGNITY AND ELEGANCE, MAKE YOUR CHOICE FROM THE WILLETT Elswick OR Wildwood Cherry COLLECTION

Use Cherry with:

Soft, subtly colored walls or panelling

18th Century English and French wallpaper

Delicate chintzes of formal design

Fine cotton prints

Needlepoint, embroidery and quilting

Damasks, brocades, brocatelle, taffetas, antique satins, fine stripes, velvet

Heirloom silver, brass, and copper

Oriental and needlework rugs; broadloom, chenille and cotton carpets

Oil paintings, colored engravings and miniatures

Painted tole, marbles, and alabaster

Wedgewood, Chinese figurines, and Spode

Accessories are the final accent, and your selection will make or break the scheme. Unusual accessories will add distinctiveness, if consideration is given to their balance, scale, and rhythm. Place lamps so that light is evenly distributed. Try to keep the tops on a line with each other. Scale them to the pieces to which they are related. Group pictures, and hang them low so that they can be seen from a sitting position.

Formal balance of accessories is shown on the cover in the pairing of wall sconces, pictures and chairs on either side of the hutch. On Page 6 informal balance combines a striking black-and-white lamp with a subdued mirror and plant and is also an example of weight in color balance. Rhythm is illustrated twice on Page 3—the oval tray repeats the line of the pitcher on top of the secretary and the round tray reflects the form of the pitcher on the coffee table. Color rhythm in accessories can be seen on the inside back cover where the red figure in the spreads is accented in lamps and dresser box.

Today, families and their ideas change rapidly. The best-planned homes need some redoing every few years. Whether you are starting from scratch or planning to add some new pieces, you will find the Willett Open Stock Plan offers many new possibilities in furniture grouping. Keep your home looking forward, not backward, so that you and your family will get the most out of life with a beautiful design for living.

Where your decorating or redecorating plans include the purchase of new Willett upholstered and occasional pieces, see your Willett dealer concerning a new decorating service Willett is now offering at a nominal charge. This charge will be refunded when the Willett pieces are purchased.

One of the best and easiest ways to keep the surface clean and lustrous, and give it additional wax protection, is to follow the recommendations of Johnson in the use of their product — Pride. Pride will clean the finish when you apply it and needs only an easy wiping when dry to provide a beautiful, lustrous finish. Waxed surfaces are hard and dry and dust is easily and quickly whisked away.

HOW TO CARE FOR YOUR Willett FURNITURE

Willett solid cherry and maple furniture is unequalled for the quality of its wood and the beauty of its design and finish. Skilled Willett craftsmen and finishers spent many hours toning and rubbing down the finish to give it the flawless lustre that is the sign of quality furniture.

Willett hand-rubbing over the oven-baked lacquer finish is done with special compounds and Johnson's waxes to impart the warm satin sheen that only wax can give. No oil is used in any of our rubbing operations, since oil leaves a hazy film which is difficult to remove from lacquer. Oil or oil polishes should not be used on Willett furniture.

If you should find it necessary to remove spilled things that may seem to resist this normal cleaning and polishing, use a soft cloth dampened slightly with lukewarm water, to which a very mild soap has been added. Wipe with the grain and dry at once with a soft, clean cloth. Follow this with a final application of Johnson's Pride to add the very desirable protective wax lustre.

Daily Maintenance Daily dusting of your Willett furniture should be part of your regular household routine. If an accumulation of dust and dirt is allowed to remain on furniture, it may result in tiny scratches which dull the finish. Use cheesecloth, flannel, wool or old silk cloths, never new materials which may be hard or linty. The cloth that has been used for Pride makes a good dustcloth.

Your upholstered Willett pieces need only simple care, too. A weekly cleaning with the proper attachment to your vacuum cleaner is recommended. Or if you prefer, brush all corners and crevices with a small, stiff whisk broom. It is important that you do not let the fabric become overly soiled. The weekly use of a dry-cleaning fluid will keep the fabric in good condition. To apply, use an old but clean washcloth slightly dampened with cleaning fluid. Then with straight, light strokes rub the arms, backs, and seat cushions. Work in a well-ventilated room. If possible do not place any pieces of furniture next to a hot radiator. The heat from the radiator sets up air currents which carry dust that will be deposited on upholstery fabrics.
